

Drama troupe announces auditions

Men and women needed for March production

Posted December 29, 2011

The newly formed Ghost Light Players of MetroWest will hold auditions for their first production, "Almost, Maine," on Tuesday, January 17th and Thursday, January 19th, from 7:00 PM to 9:00 PM at First Church in Marlborough Congregational. The show calls for an ensemble cast of five men and five women within the age range of twenties to early forties. Ghost Light Players will be performing Almost, Maine in March of 2012.

Ghost Light Players of MetroWest aim to hearken back to the days of old, when traveling troupes entertained their patrons with little more than a few props, masterful skill and an avid love of theater. Their sets will be small, the costumes minimal, but talent and passion will be on full display.

For those interested in learning more, a Meet and Greet will be held on Sunday, January 8th, 2:00 PM at First Church. Meet the director, stage manager and producer of the show, as well as other folks from the community, and learn about the play.

Kat Alix-Gaudreau, the Artistic Director for Ghost Light Players, is excited about the new theater company, "Ghost Light Players gives me the exciting opportunity to work with the very talented people of Marlborough and the MetroWest area. I love the challenge of creating something out of nothing, and Community Theater provides that challenge in spades. I look forward to mounting our first production and seeing where it takes us from there.”

For additional information on the theater company or the show, Almost, Maine, email info@ghostlightplayers.com or visit www.ghostlightplayers.com.